

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF PUERTO RICO

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff,

v.

[2] HÉCTOR MIRANDA-ROJAS,

Defendant.

CRIMINAL NO. 12-256 (SCC)(HRV)

MAGISTRATE JUDGE’S REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Pending before the Court is defendant Héctor Miranda-Rojas’ (hereinafter “Mr. Miranda-Rojas”) motion for reduction of sentence (compassionate release) pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i). (Docket No. 510). The matter has been referred to me for report and recommendation. For the reasons outlined below, I recommend that the motion be DENIED.

Background

On May 13, 2015, Mr. Miranda-Rojas pleaded guilty to Count One of the Indictment which charged him and others with a conspiracy to import into the United States from a place outside thereof, five (5) kilograms or more of cocaine in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 952 and 953. (Docket Nos. 254, 256). The Court sentenced Miranda-Rojas on August 11, 2015, to a 192-month term of imprisonment. (Docket Nos. 270, 271).

1 On December 4, 2020, Mr. Miranda-Rojas filed his original motion for 2 compassionate release. (Docket No. 436). The motion was based on the risks associated 3 with the COVID-19 pandemic. The matter was referred to United States Magistrate
4 Judge Bruce J. McGiverin (Docket No. 477), who after holding a hearing (Docket Nos.
5 488, 495), recommended that the motion for compassionate release be denied. (Docket
6 No. 489). Over Miranda-Rojas' objections, the recommendation was adopted by the 7 then presiding district judge. (Docket No. 501). Mr. Miranda-Rojas appealed (Docket
8 No. 504) and the First Circuit affirmed. (Docket No. 508).

10 Mr. Miranda-Rojas filed his new motion for compassionate release, the one 11 currently pending before the Court, on June 20, 2023. (Docket No. 510). The United 12 States has not opposed this new motion.

14 A search of the Bureau of Prison's ("BOP") inmate locator revealed that Mr.
15 Miranda-Rojas is currently under the residential re-entry program (RRM), commonly 16 known as halfway house, with an expected release date of March 16, 2025. See BOP
17 Inmate Locator, <https://www.bop.gov/inmateloc/> (last visited May 16, 2024).

19 Applicable Law and Discussion

20 The crux of Mr. Miranda-Rojas' argument is that the enactment of the Sentencing
21 Commission's amended policy statement regarding compassionate release motions 22 (U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13) has changed the legal landscape on which his original motion was 23 decided. He claims that the amended policy statement expanded the criteria for what 24 can qualify as extraordinary and compelling reasons and it clearly gives the court "more 25 discretion to determine when a sentencing reduction is warranted." (Docket No. 510 at 26 4). Miranda-Rojas also argues that in characterizing him as a danger to society in ruling on his first motion, the Court ignored that other similarly situated defendants, and defendants with more serious criminal conduct and records, have been granted sentencing reductions.¹ The defendant highlights his rehabilitative efforts while in prison as well as his father's deteriorating health as additional reasons why his sentence should be reduced. It is interesting that Miranda-Rojas contends that the amended policy statement of the Sentencing Commission is what opens the door for a new look at his circumstances after the Court denied compassionate release while at the same time framing his argument under the pre-amended policy statement rubric of cases like United States v. Ruvalcaba and United States v. Trenkler, infra. In sum, Miranda-Rojas asserts that he has established extraordinary and compelling reasons warranting release and that he is not a danger to the community.

The so-called compassionate release statute allows a court acting on a defendant-filed motion—as long as such reduction is consistent “with applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission”—to reduce the term of imprisonment (and... impose a term of probation or supervised release with or without conditions that does not exceed the unserved portion of the original term of imprisonment), after considering the factors set forth in section 3553(a) to the extent that they are applicable, if it finds that—(i) extraordinary and compelling reasons warrant such a reduction

¹ The only concrete examples cited are the cases of Alexander Capo-Carrillo who received a reduction of his sentence under retroactive amendment 782, Criminal No. 03-081 (GAG)), and Carlos Pagan-San Miguel, who was granted compassionate release by stipulation of the parties. Criminal No. 91-170 (PAD). The circumstances of these cases are distinguishable both procedurally and substantively.

1 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A)(i). This statute is one of the very few exceptions to the rule that
2 once imposed, a term of imprisonment shall not be modified. United States v. Saccoccia,
3 10 F.4th 1, 3 (1st Cir. 2021).

4 A defendant seeking compassionate release must establish three things: (1) that 5 extraordinary and compelling reasons warrant a sentence reduction; (2) that the 6 reduction is consistent with the applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing
7 Commission; and (3) that relief is appropriate under the circumstances of the case after 8 considering the applicable 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factors. See United States v. Quiros-
9 Morales, 83 F.4th 79, 84 (1st Cir. 2023).

10 With respect to the first prong—whether the reasons advanced by the defendant 11 are extraordinary and compelling—the determination is “guided by the plain meaning of 12 those terms.” United States v. Canales-Ramos, 19 F.4th 561, 566 (1st Cir. 2021). “The 13 plain meaning of ‘extraordinary’ suggests that a qualifying reason must be a reason that 14 is beyond the mine-run either in fact or in degree By the same token, the plain 15 meaning of ‘compelling’ suggests that a qualifying reason must be a reason that is both 16 powerful and convincing.” Id. (citations omitted).

17 Prior to November 1, 2023, and because the Sentencing Commission had not 18 issued an amended policy statement applicable to prisoner-initiated compassionate 19 release motions, the First Circuit held that district courts had discretion to “consider any 20 complex of circumstances raised by a defendant, as forming an extraordinary and 21 compelling reason warranting relief.” United States v. Ruvalcaba, 26 F.4th 14, 28 (1st
22 Cir. 2022). Subsequently, in United States v. Trenkler, 47 F.4th 42, 47-48 (1st Cir. 2022), 23 it was clarified that pursuant to the holding in Ruvalcaba, district courts “may conduct
25
26
27
28

1 a holistic review to determine whether the individualized circumstances [of the 2 defendant], taken in the aggregate, present an ‘extraordinary and compelling’ reason to 3 grant compassionate release,” including alleged sentencing errors.

5 It is imperative to note that the Sentencing Commission’s policy statement
6 regarding defendant-filed motions for compassionate release is now in effect. See
7 U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13 (Nov. 1, 2023). Consequently, the court “must take heed of” the policy
8 statement as noted in United States v. Rivera-Rodriguez, 75 F.4th 1, 18 n.22 (1st Cir.
9 2023), and consider its scope in deciding what constitutes an extraordinary and 10 compelling reason. United States v. Quiros-Morales, 83 F.4th at 84.

11
12 In the policy statement, the Sentencing Commission has identified six 13 circumstances that individually or in combination may provide extraordinary and 14 compelling reasons for a reduction in sentence. U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13(b). These are: certain 15 medical circumstances such as a terminal illness or inability to receive medical care while 16 incarcerated, id., § 1B1.13(b)(1); the defendant’s age, id. § 1B1.13(b)(2); the defendant’s 17 family circumstances, id. § 1B1.13(b)(3); the defendant having been the victim of sexual 18 or physical abuse by or at the direction of a correctional officer, id. § 1B1.13(b)(4); a catch-19 all provision of any other reason or combination of reasons similar in gravity to those 20 described in (1) through (4), id. § 1B.13(b)(5); and if the defendant received an unusually 21 long sentence, id. § 1B1.13(b)(6).

22
23 Relevantly, with respect to medical circumstances, the policy statement provides 24 in pertinent part that extraordinary and compelling reasons exist when:
25

26 (B) The defendant is—

27 (i) suffering from a serious physical or medical condition,
28

2 *****

3 that substantially diminishes [his] ability . . . to provide self-care 4 within the environment of a correctional facility and from which he or she is not expected to recover.

5 U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13(b)(1)(B)(i). As to family circumstances, extraordinary and compelling 6 reasons exist, for instance, when the parent of the defendant is incapacitated and “the 7 defendant would be the only available caregiver for the parent.” U.S.S.G. §
8 1B1.13(b)(3)(C).

10 After careful consideration, I find that Mr. Miranda-Rojas has failed to establish 11 the existence of extraordinary and compelling reasons to warrant a reduction of his 12 sentence in this, his second attempt. As the record reflects, the defendant already 13 contracted and recovered from COVID-19. What Judge McGiverin characterized as a 14 close call with respect Miranda-Rojas’ experiencing the effects of long COVID and the 15 inability of Fort Dix to meet his medical needs (Docket No. 489 at 13), is no longer an 16 issue since he has been released from the prison setting and is currently in the residential 17 reentry component. See United States v. Little, No. 4:19CR276, 2022 WL 4017466; 2022
18 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 159586 at *7 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 2, 2022)(“The defendant’s move to the 19 Residential Reentry program itself also significantly diminishes, any extraordinary and 20 compelling reason for release.”). Following his custody change, Miranda-Rojas has not 21 supplemented his motion to assert that his current medical conditions still represent a 22 risk to his health or that they substantially diminish his ability to provide self-care.
23 United States v. Neal, No. 17-cr-00300-DAD-BAM, 2024 WL 1886476, 2024 U.S. Dist.
24 LEXIS 79129 at *8-9 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 30, 2024)(arguments about the COVID-related 25
26
27
28

1 circumstances rendered moot when defendant was transferred to the RRM and he did
2 not file supplemental briefing.)

3 It should also be noted that “[w]hile COVID-19 is still a threat, the conditions that 4 exist today are nothing like the extreme measures that were necessary at the beginning
5 of the pandemic.” United States v. Fabian, Cr. No. 21-00054-MSM-LDA, 2023 WL
6 8449453, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 216856, at *5 (D.R.I. Dec. 6, 2023); see also United 7 States v. Doe, Cr. No. 18-10360-MLW, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105316, at*2-3 (D. Mass.
8 June 16, 2023)(“The COVID-19 pandemic was extraordinary[;][h]owever, it no longer
9 constitutes the emergency that it once did.”) Correctional facilities have developed 10 procedures to ameliorate the risk of infection, vaccines are readily available, and 11 transmission within the prison population is relatively low.² See United States v.
12 Berrios-Cruz, Criminal No. 12-0162 (GMM), 2023 WL 4838152, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS
13 131366, at *9 (D.P.R. July 28, 2023)(noting that as pandemic conditions evolved, factors
14 that satisfied the extraordinary and compelling standard at the beginning of it, were less 15 likely to satisfy the standard today, particularly with the widespread availability of 16 vaccines.). So, even if Miranda-Rojas was still housed in a traditional prison setting, for 17 the reasons noted, he would have failed to establish extraordinary and compelling 18 reasons with respect to his COVID-19 claim.
19
20
21
22
23
24
25

26 ² Statistics from the BOP show the majority of the facilities at zero (0) cases. The facility with the highest 27 number of open COVID-19 cases is at 6, out of a prison population of 1,025 inmates. See BOP Statistics:
28 Inmate COVID-19 (last visited April 16, 2024).

1 I also must reject Miranda-Rojas' family circumstance claim because he does not
2 sufficiently develop the same. He states the medical circumstances of his father but does
3 not proffer anything that would allow the Court to conclude that he is the only available
4 caregiver as required by U.S.S.G. § 1B1.13(b)(3)(C). United States v. Mackenzie, 458 F.
5 Supp. 3d 53, 55 (D. Mass. 2020)(no extraordinary and compelling reasons existed 6 because there was no indication that defendant was the only available caretaker of his 7 grandson); see also United States v. Taveras, No. 19—cr-40049-MGR-5, ___ F. Supp. 3d
8 ___, 2024 WL 1606013, 2024 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 67198 at *13-14 (D. Mass Apr. 12, 2024).

10 Finally, assuming arguendo the existence of extraordinary and compelling 11 reasons, I find that a reduction of Mr. Miranda-Rojas' sentence would still be 12 inconsistent with the § 3553(a) factors and that he continues to be a danger to the 13 community for essentially the same reasons determined by Judge McGiverin and upheld
14 by the First Circuit. The offense of conviction was extremely serious and he has a 15 troubling criminal record. Thus, the seriousness of the offense, the need to provide just 16 punishment, the need to protect the public, and the need to promote respect for the law
17 weigh heavily against a reduction of sentence in this case. See United States v. Martinez, 18 No. 2:18-cr-00089-JAW, 2023 WL 3305674, 2023 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 79444 at *29 (D.
19 Me. May 8, 2023). The argument that other "similarly situated" or worse defendants 20 were granted reductions of sentence is a nonstarter because the two cases cited are not 21 adequate comparators.
22
23
24

25 Conclusion

26 In view of the above, I recommend that the defendant's motion for compassionate
27 release at Docket No. 510 be DENIED.
28

1 This report and recommendation is filed pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B) and
